Knock-out night brings fine display

IRVINE CAMERA CLUB

The club held its annual knock-out competition, when members are encouraged to enter work that has not been seen before.

The result was a fantastic collection of photographs of all genres.

Everyone was asked to vote for their favourite image as they came up in random pairs.

The photo with the least votes was knocked out and given a short critique by judge Clive Watkins.

This made for some friendly banter as each of his own entries was knocked out well before the final round.

As we progressed through the rounds the voting became closer and closer, with recounts needed on more than a few occasions.

Paul Kelly's night-time photograph 'Reflections' of the viaduct in Berwick stole the hearts of the audience and it was crowned the winner at the end of the evening.

Paul will be awarded the Ian Davidson Memorial Trophy at the club's prize giving night tonight.

As we head into the summer season the club will move to bi-weekly meetings at Dreghorn's Townend Community Centre, with alternate weeks reserved for field trips and other photographic events.

Everyone is welcome to come along, with details available at www.irvinecc.co.uk.
